After practicing law for more than two decades in the United States and in India, Mr. Bindra is focused on business development opportunities for the Firm. His areas of focus include India, where he is increasingly spending his time and is very active with a number of large as well as small companies, as well as a number of industry groups in the life sciences, manufacturing, IT and emerging technology areas. Mr. Bindra is also focused on business development opportunities for the Firm in the renewable energy and cleantech areas where he is the co-founder of organizations such as the Cleantechology and Sustainable Industries Organization, the MIT-Stanford-Berkeley Nanotechnology Forum and the Atlantic Emerging Technology Forum.

Mr. Bindra was previously a partner with an international law firm in Silicon Valley where his areas of expertise included international business transactions, emerging business issues including corporate formation and financings, resolution of founders disputes, business development, strategic alliances, and technology licensing. Mr. Bindra was co-chair of that Firm's Emerging Technology and India Practice Teams.

Mr. Bindra is involved in a variety of other emerging technology related initiatives, including conferences and seminars. Mr. Bindra was previously the General Counsel for The Enterprise Network, a Silicon Valley business incubator with thirty-five member companies in the renewable energy, wireless, infrastructure, life-sciences, and network areas. Mr. Bindra continues to work with a large number of these companies in assisting them to commercialize cutting-edge technologies developed at NASA. Mr. Bindra works closely with members of The Indus Entrepreneurs and Silicon Valley Indian Professionals Association, of which he was one of the founding members.
